

Ghislaine TYAL is a clinical psychologist who graduated from Paris Diderot University (Paris VII, France) in 2016. Ghislaine is also a graduate in political psychology from the University of Belfast (United Kingdom) in 2017 and received a specialized training in the field of political psychology at Stanford University (California, USA) which highlights her interest in the subject.

Today, she not only works as a clinical psychologist in the psychiatric medical sector in the first private psychiatric clinic in the Maghreb region (Casablanca, Morocco), but also takes part in the voluntary as well as the business sector.

Absorbed in a field where words reign supreme, Ghislaine spends her days between associative activism for the rights of people with mental disabilities, the commitment to women's rights and the vast field of psychiatry. In 2018 she created the company "Oratio", whose entire mission is to highlight and put forward: speech.

Inspired by the most innovative methodologies, her approach is based on the most recent scientific work. Her training is constantly evolving allowing her to remain at the forefront of knowledge in the field and to respond as best as possible to the needs of potential beneficiaries of her expertise.
